

I took this picture thinking that this is how many people think that Latinos get to the U.S. It might be true for some, but not for everybody. I have respect for those who did come this way; they must have gone through a lot. Doesn't matter how we got here, we are still humans beings. Humans that need rights, humans that need health care, humans that need to have our voices heard in the community. In the end, we are all humans.

-Alejandro Castro, 17

*This project was sponsored by San Mateo County BHRS
Office of Diversity and Equity in partnership with PCRC*

I took this picture to show the different jobs many Latinos do. This picture shows pan dulce and how it's made. In Latino culture we use pan dulce during family gatherings, breakfast or dinner. It's something that brings our families together and we enjoy it.

-Dañia Jimenez, 16

This project was sponsored by San Mateo County BHRS
Office of Diversity and Equity in partnership with PCRC

This photo means solidarity between white, black, and Latin- American people who struggle to work. You can see in this photo the work most Latin-American people do here in the U.S. This photo also represents culture. Maybe you think this picture is too cluttered, but everything in this picture has a special significance that people believe in like faith, hard work, and life.

-Jose Luis Figueroa Olivera

*This project was sponsored by San Mateo County BHRS
Office of Diversity and Equity in partnership with PCRC*

I took this picture thinking about the people that come from my country. We use boots on special occasions. For example, when we go to rodeos. People from the United States also use boots. You can see in this photo that there are various styles to use. People use boots to represent their culture and their way of being. Sometimes they use boots just for fun or because they like how they look.

-Reyna Moreno, 16

*This project was sponsored by San Mateo County BHRS
Office of Diversity and Equity in partnership with PCRC*

This picture represents the hard work that the Latinos do in the camps to bring food to the community. To cultivate this food takes a lot of hard work, blood, sweat, and suffering.

-Saul Pascual, 17

*This project was sponsored by San Mateo County BHRS
Office of Diversity and Equity in partnership with PCRC*

