Youth Commission Reports on Health Status of Adolescents

By Brook Costello, Youth Commissioner Program Coordinator, StarVista

The 2014-15 Adolescent Report created by the San Mateo County Youth Commission, with support from partners including StarVista and the San Mateo County Health System, provides a glimpse into the health status of our adolescent population and includes policy recommendations to improve it. This is the third report of its kind for the County, the first was published in 2001 and the second in 2007, which resulted in several major accomplishments, one of which was the creation of the San Mateo County Children and Youth Bill of Rights in 2009. The report is organized into six areas: Demographics, Overall Health, Alcohol, Tobacco, and Other Drugs, Sex and Sexuality, Discrimination, and Violence. The San Mateo County Youth Commission urges youth and adults across the county to advance the recommendations in this Report in any capacity they are able. Promoting the health and well-being of youth in San Mateo County must be front and center across all our work if we are to create a successful future for generations to come.

Among the most staggering findings in the report surround Mental Health, and at the time: 38% of female and 23% of male respondents reported having suicidal thoughts; In the past month, nearly 70% of respondents reported being nervous, depressed or emotionally stressed; Students attending non-traditional schools reported higher rates of depression-related feelings. 70% of respondents reported that school work, projects or finals was the primary cause of depression related feelings. The policy recommendations to address these staggering mental health findings, include providing teachers and administrators with training on Social and Emotional Learning so that they can better support their students Social Emotional Learning development through role modeling; and, ensuring adequate funding and training for a range of school professionals to recognize the signs of depression, self-injury, and suicidal ideation, and to connect students with appropriate services, including specific training for meeting the needs of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender youth.

The report can be found at the link below.

Chinese Outreach Worker Reaches Underserved Population

By Sunny Choi, BHRS Chinese Outreach Worker

In June 2014, the BHRS Office of Diversity and Equity (ODE) Chinese Health Initiative (CHI) team launched the Pilot Chinese Outreach program to address underutilization of BHRS services among the Chinese community with a coordinated approach of education, outreach, engagement and connection to behavioral health services. Sunny Choi, a part-time bilingual Outreach Worker, was hired as part of this pilot program to provide outreach to Chinese immigrants and Chinese Americans living in San Mateo County. He was introduced at the “Cultivating Wellness” event to partners and community members.

Following are highlights of the Chinese Outreach Program activities during the first six months, June-December 2014:

- Created seven targeted languages and culturally appropriate outreach materials.
- Conducted outreach and education to 23 service organizations throughout San Mateo County
- Created five strategic partnerships such as Chinese Hospital, North East Medical Services (NEMS), and Self-Help for Elderly to better serve and link Chinese...
From the Director's Desk - Stephen Kaplan, Director, BHRS

Pam Hyde, director of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Administration (SAMHSA) and Paolo Del Vecchio, director of the Center for Mental Health Services recently released a 5 point plan to improve the nation's mental health system (see link below):

After a brief description of SAMHSA's points I have provided some but not all of the examples of how we are doing within each of the 5 points. We have been fortunate that funding through the Mental Health Services Act and Measure A has provided the resources for many substantial enhancements to our system of care.

1. Increase Prevention, Treatment and Recovery Services by investing in more prevention efforts including those focused on reducing suicides, integrated treatment and early intervention, and providing supports such as housing and employment, and peer support with a major focus on individuals living with a serious mental illness and their families.

BHRS efforts include early intervention with preschool children and their families: developing and integrating trauma informed care; early psychosis and bi-polar intervention/remission program; expansion of services to families with young children; community based prevention partnerships; full service partnerships for children/youth/adults and older adults, supportive housing projects; and community college scholar- ships for consumers.

2. Expand the Mental Health Workforce- trauma informed, recovery oriented and culturally-competent by investing in the education and training including peer and family support workers.

BHRS efforts include: community psychiatry residency program; loan stipend program; internships; the Lived Experience Academy; and the Health Ambassador Program.

3. Widen the Use of Health Information Technology - expand outreach and engagement through telepsychiatry, self-care applications, on-line therapies and other approaches.

BHRS efforts include: the implementation of Avatar (our electronic health record); implementation of "business intelligence" software. We are currently exploring the use of telepsychiatry and self-care applications.

4. Educate the Public - invest in multiple, evidenced based strategies to educate, create awareness, and outreach to reduce prejudice and discrimination.

BHRS efforts include: Stigma Free San Mateo campaign; culturally diverse health initiatives; BHRS blog and Wellness Matters.

5. Invest in Research. We need to continue to learn what works best for different people in varying circumstances.

BHRS efforts include: full service partnership and prevention/early intervention evaluations: consumer and family satisfaction survey, employee engagement survey; MHSA planning focus groups.

I am proud of the work being done in the programs and projects mentioned above as I am with all the services and supports provided by so many individuals and organizations throughout our system. I am thankful for the courage and fortitude of our clients/consumers and their families.

Ms. Hyde and Mr. Del Vecchio challenge us to continue to progress and evolve in these areas to provide the highest quality of care for those who seek and need our services. San Mateo County BHRS and its partners are up to this challenge...for that I am certain! 😊

Giving Thanks on Valentine's Day

I am frequently amazed at the kind and skillful care our clients receive from our many community partners. I am moved by their generosity of spirit, and I see firsthand the positive impact their care has on our clients' lives. Unfortunately, not all providers are aware of how life-changing their interventions can be.

On February 13, several clients and I returned to the San Mateo Medical Center's Psychiatric Emergency Services (PES) to say “thank you.” The clients spoke to Dr. John Furman and the nursing staff about their experience while at PES. They described in detail how much they were moved by their generosity of community partners. I am amazed to see them in the flesh as ‘out’ for being such a Rockstar Change Agent! Matt’s simple-yet-genius idea, combined with his trademark modesty made, for a “powerful experience” – to quote a PES nurse in attendance. It was an uncomplicated idea – get some former clients, pick up a cake, arrange an afternoon visit – that had a profound and meaningful impact. Matt – you are a treasure!

San Mateo Medical Center Psychiatric Emergency staff and visitors.

The Change Agent CARE Team has known of Matt’s awesomeness for quite some time and would like to take this moment to publically “out” him for being such a Rockstar Change Agent! Matt’s simple-yet-genius idea, combined with his trademark modesty made, for a “powerful experience” – to quote a PES nurse in attendance. It was an uncomplicated idea – get some former clients, pick up a cake, arrange an afternoon visit – that had a profound and meaningful impact.

Measure A Funds Eliminate Wait List for Pre-To-Three Clients

The Measure A funds added six new therapists to the Pre-to-3 Team, allowing us to reduce our waitlists for both Partners for Safe and Healthy Children and Pre to Three clients from over 100 to 0! We are now able to see more children and to provide additional Mommy & Me groups. We have also expanded services to children with sensory integration issues; are now identifying mothers early on with the assessments provided by the Women, Infants and Children program (WIC) and Family Health Public Health Nurses; and are addressing early on the infants who are suspected of emotional distress, relationship problems or regulatory problems, or were born medically fragile, preterm or with birth trauma.

In addition, the new staff have greatly reduced the stress on therapists carrying large case loads and reduced the stress of outside agencies and Child Protective Services (CPS) waiting for their clients to be seen.

Measure A increased our sense of hope and has collectively reduced our anxiety of having so many people on the waitlist.

About Pre-To-Three

The Pre-To-Three Unit is made up of therapists, community workers, and a family partner whose focus is on empowering families with children ages 0-5 and pregnant mothers, supporting women with severe mental illness who are pregnant or lactating, and providing psychotherapy to parents and their children ages 0-5 who have open an Child Protective Services case (Partners for Safe and Healthy Children). All our services support the child/parent (caregiver) relationship. We provide treatment to children 0-5 years old who are experiencing stress, behavioral/emotional difficulties, or have experienced trauma.

Clinicians work with the child and parent together in order to strengthen the relationship with their parent, allowing the child to heal. Therapists work hard to help the parent and child reunify when CPS has removed the child due to safety concerns or to help the child and a new caregiver form a healthy relationship in order to support the child in their development.

Reunification work consists of working with the parent through psychotherapy to help the parent read their baby/child's cues, understand and provide for their child's needs and learn how to have a healthier relationship with their child. Treatment also includes helping the parent stabilize their mental health symptoms due to their own traumatic histories.

On January 27, the Board of Supervisors honored the County Wellness Committee for outstanding program performance by being named a recipient of the San Mateo County STARS Award. The Wellness Committee accepted the $20,000 STARS Award for program performance. It recognizes County programs that show significant improvement in performance measure results or that sustain a high level of performance over a period of time. Please congratulate your BHRS Wellness Champions: Jairo Wilches, Isabelle Valderrama, Kelly Sheridan, Liz Downard, Yudisia Lozada, and Chantae Rochester. They are doing great things at many of our sites including nutritional and exercise classes and healthy snacks.

Wellness Matters

Our Cordilleras Campus Redesign Project has moved into its second full year of operation. We are now gathering additional information from key informants to better inform our campus space, operations, design and practices. HGA, our contracted architectural consultant, will gather and use this information to create detailed bridging documents so we end up with a campus designed with all of the important elements.

The information we need will be gathered using specially designed questionnaires that will be distributed electronically to key informants in March, which include representatives from the benchmark facilities tour we conducted locally and nationally last year; consumers of the facilities; families of consumers; and experts in the field. This information will be reviewed, collated, consolidated and then used for a series of smaller focus groups that will be held in April.

After the bridging documents are completed, our Department of Public Works (DPW) will put out Request for Proposals (RFP’s) for contractors who may be interested in building our new campus. The contractor that is ultimately selected will be required to adhere to the details in the bridging documents, thus ensuring that the ultimate design best matches our vision to create a recovery and healing environment for consumers.

Cordilleras Corner: Redesign Project - Terry Wilcox-Rittgers

On February 13, Instructors Lauren Getuiza, BHRS Office of Diversity and Equity and Michael Lim, San Mateo County Health Ambassador, certified 33 Daly City Westmoor High School juniors and seniors in Youth Mental Health First Aid (YMHFA), becoming the first cohort of peers in the county to receive the training.

The students received the training during an elective Peer Resource class, where they learn skills and tools to be student leaders and helpful resources to others on campus. Their teacher, Sarmen Kevorkian and Wellness Counselor, Ki Gaines found that the YMHFA curriculum aligned well with the goals of their class and, after hearing of the program at the County Office of Education’s annual Respect 24/7 Conference, connected with the Office of Diversity and Equity to coordinate the in-class training.

For five weeks during the Peer Resource class, students learned about stigma related to mental health, signs and symptoms of common mental health issues for young people, typical stages of adolescence, the differences between non-suicidal self-injury and suicide. Students also learned how to approach and help a friend who may be in crisis.

Training youth in YMHFA can offer numerous benefits, as young people socialize and communicate their challenges more readily to one another than they would with an adult. Students were empowered with tools to be able to be a supportive friend and connect friends with the appropriate level of help.

Students have already begun coming forward with examples of applying the newly learned tools with friends, family members and even strangers. In one incident, a 16 year old student applied the 5-step action plan he had learned from the YMHFA training just days before. Upon noticing a visibly distraught youth on the BART train, he approached her, initiated a conversation and discovered she was contemplating ending her life. He let her know that thoughts of suicide do not need to be acted upon and even though they were strangers, he cared about her. The student then proceeded to give her resources and emotional regulative tools.

International Stigma Conference “Together Against Stigma”

BHRS’ Office of Diversity and Equity sponsored three individuals to attend the 7th International Conference—Together Against Stigma: Each Mind Matter, held in San Francisco last month. Here’s what the participants said about their experience:

Alan Cochran
As a consumer, I was excited to see so many people attend from all over the world—800 people from 17 countries. All were there to talk about ways to fight against the stigma around mental health.

I liked Allison K. Malmon, who founded Active Minds after her brother, a 22-year-old college student committed suicide. She shared how the age gap influenced how people dealt with being the relative or friend of a person who had committed suicide. After offering her condolences, her mother’s friends just stopped coming around, whereas her own friends wanted to know how something like that could happen and how they could help her cope with such a tragedy.

That prompted her to start Active Minds which now has chapters at colleges around the country, to educate young people on mental health issues and the warning signs of suicide.

Another presenter shared treatment percentages for mental illness around the world. In the U.S., only 30% of the people who need help get treatment. While this seems like a small number, I was surprised to find out we lead the world in this area, with Europe coming in second at 25%. Other countries like Nigeria were as low as 2%.

Each Mind Matters was represented by Asher Hamilton-Killii, who I first met at a conference on spirituality and wellness in Oakland. I was asked to be an area leader for Each Mind Matters, responsible for recruiting, training and organizing a group of people to do presentations at their organization. I look forward to working with them to help educate people about mental health issues. I want to thank BHRS for sponsoring me at the conference as I enjoyed this experience very much.

Robert Ortiz
I decided to attend the conference to find out more about how to battle stigma. Mental health professionals, consumers, activists, and non-governmental organizations were all in attendance together. The stage was set for the fight against stigma.

The speakers were amazing—Heather Stuart, PhD, from World Psychiatric Association (WPA) shared how they came to the conclusion that unless they started to fight stigma they could not really help their clients. Recovery is a community affair and that means everybody has a stake in the client getting well. WPA has made great strides towards ending stigma globally.

I was blown away by the young people speaking at this conference. They have recovered and are inspiring others to get into recovery. Mackenzie Ellsworth, 20 years old, recovered from depression and is a great role model. Deandre Evans is a spoken word artist and a community activist.

The major theme of the conference was hope for a better world. Hope that stigma will someday end and that people all over the world will get the gift of recovery. I left the conference full of hope and gratitude. I have hope that the new generation will have a better world and I am grateful that I have been given the gift of recovery.

Jennifer Jimenez, MFT
Hundreds of people came from all parts of the world, and a sense of unity that tied both providers and consumers together as we all have the common goal - to end mental health stigma. I was happy to see there are worldwide anti-stigma campaigns. I also liked hearing about the creativity and the powerful tools used to share people’s lived experiences with mental illness, such as video, art, Photovoice, music, and media, and social media. I felt great knowing that San Mateo County is "ahead of the game," since we have our “Stigma Free San Mateo” campaign and already use tools, such as Photovoice and digital storytelling.

I learned about the process of “Coming out Proud,” which uses a tool to help guide someone to determine whether to disclose their mental illness to others. The more people are able to share their stories, and “Come out Proud,” the more we can eliminate stigma.

As a provider, I can encourage people with lived experiences to share their stories to help reduce stigma and give hope to those who are currently struggling.
BHRS Hosts its First Arab Community Training

On January 21, BHRS held its first educational training on Arab and Arab American communities. “Working with Arab American clients: a culturally relevant, sensitive, and competent approach.” The training conducted by Hazem Haja, MS, was attended by providers, staff, and community members, and is the beginning of a much-needed educational process organized in response to the growing Arab community in San Mateo County. Data from the BHRS Language Access Program show that Arabic was the 3rd most requested language in San Mateo County from 2010-2013 (after Spanish and American Sign Language), and the 2nd most requested language from 2013-2014 (after Spanish), indicating that this community is a sizable part of our client base.

The training aimed to give staff and providers tools to better understand the Arab American population, scrutinize stereotypes they and those around them may hold towards Arab American clients, learn culturally sensitive strategies for working with them, and gain confidence in using these strategies in practice. The training started with basic information about Arab societies, values, cultural norms, and religion. It moved on to talk about the stigma of receiving mental health services in the Arab community, the role of both family and religion in mental health, and finally, some recommendations to providers about how to better serve Arab community members.

Feedback from participant evaluations was overwhelmingly positive with an expressed desire for a second training. Three quarters of attendees rated the training as “excellent,” citing the trainer’s style (sharing personal experiences and engaging the participants in the training), group activity (including sharing common stereotypes about the Arab community), and informative knowledge about Arab culture, as the most valuable pieces of the training.

The training was coordinated by a group of clinicians, staff, interns, and community members invested in meeting the behavioral health needs of this community. Next steps include organizing a community meeting to provide space for a larger discussion around the emerging needs and gaps in service, and a second educational training. For more information on upcoming events, please contact Hiba Abudamous (habudamous@smcgov.org) or Jei Africa (jafrica@smcgov.org).

CHI Presents Culturally Sensitive Parent Education Workshop at Mills High School

On February 26, Mills High School and the San Mateo County Chinese Health Initiative (CHI) presented “Achieving Success and Balance in the Modern Day: How to Help your Child Survive and Thrive in their High School and College Years.” The need was originally identified by Chinese students concerned about the high stress from academic pressures; of needing to balance bi-cultural expectations; and the communication barriers with their immigrant parents. The two-hour event was presented in two simultaneous sessions - in English and in Chinese - by six clinicians from BHRS and Stanford Psychiatry. Topics included: Adolescent development, parent and adolescent relationship and communication, and resources and knowing when to ask for help. Mills students also created a short video voicing their stress to the parents (see video at www.smchealth.org/CHI).

The presentation was well attended by approximately 90 parents (24 in the Chinese presentation) learning about the importance of mental wellness for their high stress and high achieving children. The event received a good number of positive responses from parents and faculty. One parent stated, “I learned a lot from the event and we need to have more events like this for Chinese parents." A teacher stated, “This is a good first step to a much needed effort to address mental health issues for this population." A parent in the English session said “I commend you for presenting on this mental health topic that is not talked about enough but is a big issue with kids these days especially with the increased pressures of their generation,” and another said “Thank you for bringing this up...makes it ok...part of growing up. This is an eye opener.” Finally, a group of Mills students thanked CHI for putting on a workshop to help their parents help them. – Sunny Choi

Wellness Corner

Most of us have probably been lonely, down, rejected, and even struggled without hope and support at one point in our lives. A gentle pat, a smile, a word of encouragement or a gesture of support can be significant, and touch us deeply at times of need. In this second issue of Wellness Corner, please enjoy a genuine sharing from another of our dedicated Consumer Advisory’s member.

My Support System and My Wellness

I got very ill at the young age of 15. Since then, I tried doing many things to keep myself well and healthy. One thing I did was I learned many different exercises and practiced these routinely, such as jogging, running, pull-ups, and push-ups. These exercises created a good amount of “stress” for me, but always in a positive way. When I was done, the endorphins and highs naturally gave me a good feeling about myself. As I worked out in the gym, I saw many others who were there like me. I started talking with a few people and snacking and lunching with some; they started socializing with me too! Still, there were others from whom I learned different ways of relaxation; these included reading and meditating. I started hanging out in the library reading lots of books and I met some more people. All these people I met at the gym, in the library, in the community, were my support system.

When I was younger, my mother always encouraged me but I did not always listen to her. My stepfather did the same and I also did not listen to him. They were my great support, though I refused to think of it that way back then.

My many close friends gave me encouragement and hope during times in my life. They have been my valuable supports.

I know that many good people do not have the kind of support I have. So, I want to extend my support to others. I hope and pray for the mentally ill to overcome all their difficulties.

Even though sometimes I still feel trapped by mental illness, but if we all have hope and good supports, we can overcome it! – Robert Cartagena, Total Wellness Consumer Advisory Committee Member
Three New BHRS Policies

We recently approved three policies in the Quality Improvement Committee (QIC) that are critically important throughout the BHRS system. Here we highlight the key points and explain how BHRS staff members are distributing and educating teams about them. Links to the policies can be found below.

14-01: Implementation of Cultural Competency Standards. This policy was shepherded by the Office of Diversity and Equity (ODE) and explains BHRS’s commitment to providing culturally and linguistically competent services. It emphasizes the importance of honoring client/consumer/family and staff diversity in ethnicity, culture and language. It also contains a list of BHRS resources that are related to this topic. ODE has been and will continue to educate BHRS teams about this policy.

14-02: Family Inclusion Policy. Suzanne Aubry of the Office of Consumer and Family Affairs (OCFA) and Mary Taylor Fullerton, Co-Occurring Program Specialist, led the development of this policy. The policy reiterates BHRS’s strong commitment to including families in clients’/consumers’ care whenever possible. Under this policy, “family” is client defined: it may include friends, sponsors or others not typically identified as family. It outlines how clinicians can receive family input and use the information for culturally-competent, recovery-oriented care. Supervisors have been educated about this policy and will be discussing this with their teams.

14-03: Selection of Evidence-Based and Community Defined Practices. This policy clarifies BHRS’s process for using therapeutic modalities that are identified as best practices, evidence-based practices, community-based or defined evidence practices, or promising practices. It details the process for adding new practice techniques and helps staff understand the decision-making process that either allows or denies the request. ODE is also educating BHRS teams about this policy, so stay tuned!

For all BHRS QM policies, see the link below.

QM always appreciates any feedback or ideas you’d like to share with us! ✉

Coastside Community Services Resource Awareness Event

On January 26 our Coastside CSA, in partnership with Supervisor Don Horsley, Half Moon Bay Mayor Marina Fraser and many community partners put on a resource awareness event. This event was designed to better inform the community about resources that are available to get assistance with mental health and substance use challenges, medical needs, benefits, housing, educational needs, parenting, and more.

We held the event on a Monday evening in the auditorium of Cunha Intermediate School. The event was comprised of a panel that provided information especially focused on behavioral health resources (i.e. Family Assertive Support Team, Adult Resource Management, Mental Health First Aid) available in the communities and in schools. The information was provided in Spanish and in English. The panel presentation was followed with time for participants to visit the resource tables from many of the providers in the community (Sonrisas, Coastside Hope, El Centro de Libertad, etc.).

This informative event has now been held in Pacifica and in Half Moon Bay. There are plans to hold similar events in other parts of our county to educate the community about resources and how to access them. This helps make us more effective collaborative partners and better able to inform and guide the rest of our communities. ✉

Three New BHRS Health Ambassadors Supporting our Communities

BHRS Office of Diversity and Equity (ODE) is proud to introduce our three newest Health Ambassadors. Over the past year and a half, Michael Lim, Yolanda Ramirez and Mylene Rodriguez have worked diligently to complete the course requirement to represent our County and to continue their goals of further serving their communities.

Michael Lim
After completing the Health Ambassador requirements, Michael became involved in the Spirituality Initiative and Chinese Health Initiative. In this work he has volunteered to support events and also spoke on a panel at the first Chinese Outreach event, aimed at improving access to mental health and substance use services in the Chinese community. Additionally, Mr. Lim became a Youth Mental Health First Aid (YMHFA) instructor in May 2014 and is currently co-facilitating the first peer YMHFA course in San Mateo County.

Yolanda Ramirez
Yolanda consistently worked towards her goal of becoming a Health Ambassador and obtaining more tools to support her community. During her work, Yolanda became a facilitator for the ODE Parent Project® and also for the Familia a Familia courses. She has always been a supporter of the Latino Collaborative, volunteering her time and skills to support this community. While strengthening her skills to assist individuals in the community, Yolanda recognized her passion for helping others. We are proud of her recent hiring at Edgewood Center for Children and Families, where she will be a Family Partner which she states is dream come true.

Mylene Rodriguez
Mylene dedicated her time and energy to becoming a BHRS Health Ambassador, following her passion to strengthen her own skills and to be a support to other parents and community members. Over the past year, she has inspired other parents by volunteering and speaking at Parent Project® and Health Ambassador courses, and our yearly Parent Project® Reunion (see story “3rd Annual Parent Project Reunion” linked below). Through this work she has become an example to other parents of how continued learning and engagement can benefit themselves and others. This led to her supporting and applauding parents in current classes and those who are working towards becoming Health Ambassadors themselves.

We are proud of these individuals who have given their time and energy to increasing their knowledge and working towards supporting our common goal of helping those with mental health and substance use issues.

RosaMaria Oceguera
Supervising Mental Health Clinician, ACCESS Call Center

Years at BHRS/SMC: 23 Years
Hometown: Foster City, CA

What do you do?
I supervise a team of three clinicians who help link clients to Private Providers in the Network or with regional clinic care. We triage complex crisis calls from severe mental illness and mild to moderate callers, collaborate and consult with partner agencies regarding services for clients, and authorize services to providers.

What do you enjoy most about your job?
I work with a team of very dedicated, professional, and hard-working people. I enjoy being able to quickly triage clients to the appropriate level of care in order to provide quick and efficient linkage to same day assistance.

Most rewarding/memorable experience:
My most rewarding experience has been to help de-escalate suicidal clients while on the phone and connect them with services. It is nice to hear weeks/months later that the person is doing well and getting the necessary support from providers/regional care in any of our five CSAs.

Favorite hobbies/activities:
Reading, writing, walking and baking.

The Change Agent Trauma Learning Collaborative Announce the very first “Healing Hero Awards.”

The conversation on trauma and trauma-informed care in behavioral health has grown immensely over the last decade. We know that trauma deeply impacts individuals and can intensify health and wellness issues. The numbers can feel overwhelming, as highlighted by the ACE Study completed in the late 1990’s:

- Adverse Childhood Experiences [ACEs] are common...nearly 2/3 (64%) of adults have at least one. People have an ACE score of 0 to 10. Each type of trauma [e.g.: verbal abuse, poverty, divorce, neglect] counts as one, no matter how many times it occurs. You can think of an ACE score as a cholesterol score for childhood trauma;
- For example, people with an ACE score of 4, (4 or more categories of adversity):
  - are twice as likely to be smokers, and 7x’s more likely to be alcoholic.
  - have increased risk of emphysema or chronic bronchitis by nearly 400%, and suicide by 1200%.
- ACEs cause adult onset of chronic disease, such as cancer and heart disease, as well as mental illness, violence and being a victim of violence
- ACEs don’t occur alone....if you have one, there’s an 87% chance that you have two or more.
- People with high ACE scores are more likely to be violent, to have more marriages, more broken bones, more drug prescriptions, more depression, and more autoimmune diseases.
- ACEs are linked to workplace absenteeism, and for costs in health care, emergency response, mental health and criminal justice. So, the fifth finding from the ACE Study is that childhood adversity contributes to most of our major chronic health, mental health, economic health and social health issues. (http://acestoo high.com/aces-101/)

Working in the behavioral health field, we know clients have high ACE scores; with many individuals continuing to live in and endure trauma while navigating treatment. It is common that we feel the impact, as a collective workforce doing our best to serve these individuals. That is why it is especially important for behavioral health teams to not only recognize and respond to trauma in our clients but, at times, to recognize and respond to the heaviness of this work. The Substance Abuse Mental Health Service Administration (SAMHSA) recently published, “Concept of Trauma and Guidance for a Trauma-Informed Approach” (linked below) where researchers explain, “It is important to know how communities can support or impede the healing process,” and that this is another area of study in trauma work: understanding the community where the trauma and the healing occurs:

“Trauma does not occur in a vacuum. Individual trauma occurs in a context of community, whether the community is defined geographically... or organizationally. How a community responds to individual trauma sets the foundation for the impact of the traumatic event, experience, and effect. Communities that provide a context of understanding and self-determination may facilitate the healing and recovery process for the individual. Alternatively, communities that avoid, overlook, or misunderstand the impact of trauma may often be re-traumatizing and interfere with the healing process.”

The Change Agent Trauma Learning Collaborative has worked to promote Trauma-Informed Care (TIC) awareness and education since 2008. With a growing landscape of TIC efforts juxtaposed by the overwhelming pervasive nature of trauma; our group decided we needed to create an even bigger TIC Community by recognizing and honoring those who not only exemplify what it means to be Trauma Informed, but those who help promote TIC... in our system. Three well-deserving recipients were chosen to be among the first to receive a Healing Hero Award.

Healing Hero Awardees:

Leticia Smiell, BHRS Pre-3

“Leticia is always a breath of fresh air! She embodies the idea of nurturance to both colleagues and clients alike. As a trauma-informed provider, Leticia is always considering the whole individual and emphasizing their strengths and goals! Leticia always strives to create an atmosphere that respects and accepts clients, is collaborative and integrates all providers involved.”

Linda Johnson, BHRS, Girls Camp Kemp

“Linda was nominated to be a Healing Hero because of her passion and dedication in working with high at-risk adolescent girls. For 9 years, Linda has provided trauma-focused and gender responsive treatment with expertise in substance use and addiction recovery. She was also instrumental in creating trauma-informed services within the GIRLS program.”

Charlotte Ormond

StarVista, GIRLS Program

“When TLC members went to surprise recipient Charlotte Ormond at her staff meeting, she was hosting a Trauma-Informed training by Kaiser! Dr. Ormond is the epitome of a Healing Hero having spent over fifteen years dedicating her life and work to overseeing the provision of intensive day treatment program services for clients diagnosed with complex disorders, including severe trauma, mental health disorders, and addiction.

How can you promote a Trauma Informed Care System?

Here are some ideas:

1) Congratulate Linda, Leticia or Charlotte next time you see them!
2) Nominate a Healing Hero of your own for the next round of awardees. Send nominee name, brief bio, and your full endorsement to: mfullerton@smcgov.org. Next round expected summer 2015
3) Get your free copy of SAMHSA’s comprehensive TIP 57: Trauma-Informed Care in Behavioral Health Services
4) Check out these resources:
   a. “Developing a Trauma Informed Agency” – from Alameda County BHCS
   b. Trauma Informed Organizational Toolkit – focus on homelessness
   c. “Models for Developing Trauma-Informed Behavioral Health Services”

There are many examples throughout our system of ways we conduct trauma-informed work every day. Below is one team’s story of addressing the trauma of client loss.

Client Memorial:

BHRS Central County Adult Clinic has experienced a number of client deaths over the past year. The deaths have occurred for multiple reasons including suicide, medical conditions, and accidents. In an effort to honor our clients and acknowledge the impact that these losses have had on the clinical team, Tiffany Schindler, and Veronica Ochoa organized a memorial in which they invited the clinical staff to talk about clients strengths and share stories of relationships formed during the duration of their treatment at the clinic. Each client had a unique story and impacted the clinicians that worked with them on a human level.

The gathering gave members of the team who needed it a chance to express some feelings and support one another in a positive way. Other members of the team chose to visit the memorial alone; all individual choices were respected. The hope is that we can continue to have an outlet for clinicians to process, share and support one another in the event of a client’s death and other potentially traumatic experiences at the workplace.

Chinese Outreach Worker

- Linked 24 Chinese clients and their families to behavioral health services.
- Conducted outreach and awareness activities at three local community health fairs.
- Conducted eight formal seminars or presentations to the community.

Overall, the pilot program has received a good number of supportive responses from clients and other community members. For example, one client’s father stated, “I would like for the Chinese outreach/engagement program to be continued because it has provided my family with wonderful help, and I know that they are also a big support for the Chinese community.” Another community member stated, “In our church run support group for caregivers, a young man who stayed in his room for one year was finally able to come out and seek medical attention due to the help of the community worker. The parents were extremely grateful and could not say enough about the merits of this program. The family has been encouraging people to use the service."

In the next six months, the Outreach Worker will spend additional resources on reaching out to Chinese parents through schools. For example, working with a Mills high school to educate Chinese parents of high achieving and high stress children (see article, pg. 8). He will also outreach to local Chinese churches and educate their communities on mental wellness. Finally, the Outreach Worker, along with the Chinese Health Initiative will continue to collect data to support the need to facilitate access for mental health and substance use services for the community.
