"Without appropriate outreach and education, language barriers can deter many individuals from seeking treatment either because they do not know where to go or they feel they would not be able to adequately communicate with their providers."(California Racial Disparities Project, 2018)

- Pat Willard01:32:24

Thank you sheila, i know I went on a bit

- Brigitte van Essen01:32:38

Great points, Pat!

- Pat Willard01:41:38

also, the program defined by city chiefs of police of participating cities held no community sessions focused on mobile mental-health program components and response parameter potential clients and family and community members found necessary for the program to succeed

- Pat Willard01:42:20

i.e. for them to feel comfortable using it

- Pat Willard01:43:32

i.e. like product managers seeking input from potential customers of kitchen tools like toasters and crock pots they'd be interested in buying

- Clara Jaeckel01:43:48

Director Gilman and some of the city managers and police chiefs stated that a program with solely mental health staff and no law enforcement involvement could be considered based on the results of this pilot. What are the criteria that would need to be met to move to a non-LE program next?

- Pat Willard01:46:30

Agree with Clara's question

- Brigitte van Essen01:46:50

Also agree with this question.

- Pat Willard01:48:41

Because the definition of the objectives for the program are not clearly defined, no one knows what success or failure or needs improvement looks like when they see it.

- Pat Willard01:49:19

In other words, no standards set, no measures reveal any good or bad outcomes.

- Pat Willard01:49:41

Nor triggers indicated redress and fixes.

- Pat Willard01:51:00

Personal opinions of police chiefs seem to be the only factor considered.

- Pat Willard01:52:02

Thanks for listening to public thoughts and input.
